Parents need a Break

A lot of time together as a family – particularly in confined spaces - can be challenging for all family members.

The challenges in these times should not be underestimated. Therefore it is very important to find some resting time. Make sure to discuss it with your children. It would be best, if you could integrate it into your daily routines e.g. after lunch. The parents resting time can be visualised for children with a clock or egg timer. The resting time should be according to the children’s age. A 30 minutes resting time is recommended for children at the age of 3-6 years. During this time every family member is occupied with themselves. You can think out ideas what to do during this time in advance – fun fact: boredom sparks creativity.

When nerves are on the edge or you lack energy, parents cannot be their best.
Game Suggestion

Make a “Photo-Safari” with your smart phone. Make a list of items and work accordingly. The photos will be looked at and judged afterwards.

Photo-Safari:

- Something starting with the letter “C”
- A person jumping in the air
- An especially scary face
- A heart
- Something yellow
- A cloud animal
- A beautiful selfie
- Something that is making a noise
- The shadow of an object
- ... and so on

Alternative: every person secretly does pictures from the flat/house and the other family members are guessing what it is. Pssst: It is more interesting to focus on details.
